BRENNAN, Comments on

Comment on Brennan's description of "most probable" as the source of the police description of the assassin.

There should be no reason for any uncertainty. The police certainly must know the source of their information and their description. But without Brennan, there is nothing in the report to account for the broadcast description allegedly of Oswald. Recall that Brennan didn't see what he said he saw. So, where did the description come from? And if, in fact, the description did come from Brennan, how could the police have failed to order an immediate search of the spot in the Depository Building Brennan pointed out?

Even without Brennan, the police have otherways of getting the report that the alleged assassin was in the sixth floor window. There were all the photographers in the photographers' car. There was Euins.

There is a point in the report where the President's back injury is called a back wound. It is on p. . . .

On December 17, I was informed that there was a letter from Marina at the Government Printing Office. She wanted a set of testimony without paying for it.

On December 17, I learned at the Printing Office that only about 700 sets of the testimony had been sold. This would appear to be the total distribution for I also learned on that day that even the House Judiciary Committee had to buy its copies.
